

Two Poems

by Elizabeth Heisner

I.

flat stones in the stream
are cleaned by the clear water flowing slowly down

II.

the fledgling clings to the edge of the nest and pleads to the wind:
“Please let me fly!”