

Combine the following series of short sentences into one sentence.

Warm-up Set 1:

1. An atom is too small to see.
2. Atoms are made of electrons, protons, and neutrons.
3. The center of every atom is the nucleus.
4. The nucleus makes up 99.9 percent of the mass of every atom.
5. The nucleus makes up only one trillionth of the volume of an atom.

Warm-up Set 2:

1. Last week I took the train into the city.
2. My sister went with me.
3. We spent the day in the public library.
4. We were looking for information on our family's genealogy.
5. We found records dating back to 1642.

Now try combining some longer sets of sentences.

Long Set 1:

1. The wedding was over.
2. The guests were tired.
3. The guests were happy.
4. The bride and groom were ready to leave.
5. The guests got into their cars.
6. Their cars filled the parking lot.
7. They laughed and talked.
8. Suddenly the parking lot was empty.

Long Set 2:

1. My desk is cluttered.
2. It is covered with papers.
3. It is covered with books.
4. My assignment is somewhere on the desk.
5. I can't find my assignment.
6. My teacher will be angry if I turn my assignment in late.
7. My teacher will lower my grade on the assignment.
8. I wish I could find my assignment.